THE AMERICAN ZIONIST CONVENTION

The convention of American Zionists held in Pittsburg last week has no achievements of value to its credit. It has helped to aggravate the unwholesome situation which exists in American Zionism. The sore which started festering before the convention has not been disinfected or dressed at the convention. It is now worse than ever, and threatens to undermine the very being of the organization.

There are many important problems confronting American Zionism; chief among them is the question of the report of the Agency Commission. While it is true that the American Zionist body stands committed to the Agency scheme, there are nevertheless certain details and implications which could not have been foreseen in the blanket commitment, and are worthy of serious consideration. The Convention has not been able to bestow any thought on any of these matters. It went through the motions of dealing with the Agency question in the dying moments of the Convention. The delegates had neither time nor energy left to grapple with it effectively.

The convention occupied itself mainly with the task of creating a statue that might incite it to a mood of worship. The mechanics of the administration were beating out precious metal plates to cover the clay feet of their cherished idol, Lipsky. All the arts and artifices known to hero makers were here invoked to magnify the figure of the commonplace Lipsky to proportions of a legendary being. There was ballyhooing; there were billows of tears; clenching of fists and gnashing of teeth; sobbing and moaning; hysteria; bloodshot eyes; overdrawn nerves; chicanery, lying, and cheap political tricks. The object was to exalt and glorify a mediocrity, and to confound a legitimate opposition which was striving to improve the condition of the organization.

The late Zionist administration consisted of a group of mediocrities; perhaps the most inferior body ever entrusted with the management of American Zionism. It contrived to entrench itself solidly in the regard of the Zionist masses by clever handling of the press. In addition to maintaining its own organs in Yiddish and English, constantly singing its praises, it managed to gain the goodwill and support of the metropolitan Yiddish press by drafting members of the editorial staffs of the leading papers to its executive. It thus assured itself of a constant stream of favourable publicity, playing on the mass of uncritical readers.

Now there was a group of Zionists who realized the weakness of the personnel of the administration and the limitations of its leading members. They set before themselves the object of reorganizing the administrative machinery. They did not profess to offer any new programmes or policies. All they wished was to purge the administration of its incompetent members.

The standing and importance of the leaders of this opposition group were such as to challenge the attention and respect of the general public. When you find persons of the eminence of Dr. Stephen Wise, Judge Julian Mack, Prof. Frankfurter, Mrs. Lindheim and Mrs. Robert Szold ranged on the side of the opposition you are constrained to accord its claims and representations earnest thought. Moreover, the entire Hadassah organization of America was allied with the opposition. It is the best organized and most active body of Zionists in America. Prima facie its contentions are deserving of a respectful hearing.

Now the eruption of the opposition took place before Dr. Weizmann left America. The world Zionist leader apparently recognized the significance of the opposition movement. He thereupon attempted to facilitate the making of peace by appointing a commission of prominent Jewish judges to investigate the claims of the opposition and bring in a report of its findings. The committee of judges met; investigated the charges; made public its report just on the eve of the convention. One of its recommendations was that several members of the administration who had proven themselves incompetent should not be considered for re-election. One of these was the president, Mr. Louis Lipsky. And this gentleman forthwith resigned from the presidency with the intention of never taking any office in the Zionist organization.

At the convention the administration had a majority of delegates. It could do whatever it wished. The opposition was helpless. The majority, realizing its strength, allowed itself to become intoxicated with the sense of its power. It received the report of the committee of judges; it cast it aside. Another committee had been appointed to work out a programme of peace. Prof. Mordecai Kaplan was chairman of this committee. A report was submitted by this body. The majority cast it aside. The professional apologists of the administration (Abe Goldberg, who was discredited the year before, and Maurice Samuel, who was a subject of the investigations of the judges' committee) proceeded to inflame the passions of the delegates against the opposition. The Yiddish press, notably the Jewish Morning Journal (two members of whose staff are members of the administration) played on the emotions of the delegates. The majority became more and more obsessed with the notion of its strength, and worked itself into an hysteria of indignation against anyone who dared to find fault with Lipsky. In its frenzy it went to absurd lengths in glorifying Lipsky. Some of the orators described him as the greatest Jew of the day. Finally, a roorbach was circulated by the supporters of the administration in the form of a report that one of the leaders of the opposition had made a statement questioning the personal honesty of Lipsky. The opposition strenuously denied ever having made such a statement—in all its criticism there was never a question of the personal honesty of Lipsky. The delegates seized eagerly upon this report; roused themselves to a still higher pitch of emotionalism. And they proceeded to ride roughshod over all the demands of the opposition and recommendations of the peace committees. They would not content themselves with a "peace without victory." Nothing would suit them but that they "must march into Berlin to dictate terms."

The convention is over. The majority flaunted their power. They dealt summarily with the opposition. They thrust aside Dr. Stephen Wise, and Judge Mack, and Prof. Kaplan, and the entire Hadassah organization. Lipsky is again in the saddle. But the body of the Zionist organization is now in a mutilated condition, bleeding, weakened. It was poor policy for the majority to wield

SCHOLEM ALEICHEM

B. Watson of Nordia Circle

S. Rabinowitz, 1859-1917.—Scholem Aleichem is by far the most popular Jewish author of modern days. Wherever Yiddish is read and spoken there Scholem Aleichem is highly and warmly esteemed. Scholem Aleichem is the favourite of all the Jewish classes. His distinguishing characteristic is his humour. It is not satire and his readers feel that he laughs not at them but with them. Scholem Aleichem's humour lies at the very root of things and situations of human life and human nature. He is never satisfied with the superficially funny, with the low comedy of incidents and puns.

He struck at the bottom of Jewish life at such a low depth where the comic and tragic meet. There he observed all the comical in our vain tragic striving and the tragic in our comic bearings. Both appear equally human, graced by that silver lining of the inimitable humour of the great artist.

His style is as much characteristic of him as is the content of his writing. In him we find a further proof of that sound literary maxim: the style is the man. Scholem Aleichem is inconceivable without his style. It is what makes Scholem Rabinowitz, Scholem Aleichem. Scholem Aleichem's style gives you an immediate feeling of being "at home." It is the "home feeling" that only great art can give, when all that is human and elevated in us is brought forth and then soul meets soul.

On opening a page of a Scholem Aleichem book you are greeted with a broad Scholem Aleichem—"Peace be unto you. Here you are welcome." Scholem Aleichem saw the whole of Jewish life in all its aspects. For Jewish life in Scholem Aleichem's day had lost its static quality. It had become quite elastic.

Scholem Aleichem began his literary career at a very early age and wrote almost to the very last day of his all too brief life. He was a very prolific writer. Writing was his ruling passion. He wrote in the tramway car and whilst walking, and even when he was sick in bed.

Scholem Aleichem helped to raise a literary taste of the Yiddish reading public and to educate it to a higher degree of artistic and literary appreciation. He came to Yiddish literature at a time when the sensational novel of Abraham Schommer and his colleagues was in its very heyday and held complete sway over the reading public. These novels were of very poor literary quality, fantastic in content and barbaric in form.

Scholem Aleichem's first novels were written almost with the express purpose of proving to the Jewish literary of his day that a Yiddish novel could be based on real Jewish life, not resorting to the exotic and impossible, and yet satisfy the reader. And he succeeded.

Scholem Aleichem's "Yiddishe Romanen" did not altogether supplant the sensational novels of Shommer and his colleagues.

His greatest works are "Tevye der Milchiger" and "Menachem Mendel." It is in these works, particularly in "Tevye," that Scholem Aleichem lifted humour far above the sphere of the ridiculous and showed that great humour is synonymous with great art. It was in this work that he felt his artistic power and he used it to its utmost limits. It will undoubtedly remain the classical Scholem Aleichem work of Yiddish literature.

Scholem Aleichem spent a number of years in America. He had observed our life here. His unfailing eye had penetrated and his sense of humour had illuminated our American Jewish life. Some of his finest pages treat of it. He had only begun to grasp fully our life when an untimely death robbed us of him in 1917.

GERMAN-JEWISH WRITERS OF 19TH CENTURY

By Theresa Pike, 14, Sarah Girls, Miss F. Schleser, Leader

Heinrich Heise was the most gifted lyric poet since Goethe. He was born of Jewish parentage in Dusseldorfen, 1797. He made a vain attempt at a business career under the protection of a wealthy uncle, Soloman Heise, in Hambourg. In 1819 he turned to the study of law and attended in succession the universities of Bonn, Gottingen and Berlin. He took the degree of "Doctor of Law" at Gottingen in 1823. Until 1831 he travelled at his uncle's expense. In 1826 he published "Harzreise," which means a "Journey in the Harz," and in 1827 "Buchder Lieder," Book of Songs. In 1831 he went to Paris and made it his home from that time on. His chief occupation then was as a correspondent for German newspapers and French journals. His long poems, "Deutchland" and "Atta Troll," were also written during this period. In 1848 he was attacked by an incurable affection of the spinal column, and died in 1856.

Another Jewish writer was Ludwig August Frankle, who was born at Bohemia in 1810. He studied medicine at University of Vienna. He founded a school at Jerusalem in 1856. He wrote "Don Juan of Austrie," an heroic poem. His "Nach Jerusalem" deals with the east. "Zur Geschichter der Juden, in Weir," deals with the Jewish question.

A great Jewish author was Isidor Kalish who was born at Krotaschin, Prussia, in 1816. He was educated at universities of Berlin, Breslin and Prague. For some years he officiated as rabbi in Cleveland, Milwaukee and Detroit. From 1875 he devoted himself until his death to literary work. His works cover a wide field, from a volume of German poems, and a translation of Lessing's "Nathan der Wise," to a decipherment of a Phoenician inscription found near Sudan, a sketch of "Sefer Yetsira," a Kabbalistic work. He took an active part in the American Jewish reform movement and was a frequent contributor to the Jewish press.

A German poet and novelist was Moritz Hartmann, born at Duschnik in 1821. He was educated at Prague and Vienna until 1844. He wrote "Kelch and Schwert in 1845," "Neue Gedichte" in 1847, "Der Krieg in den Wald" in 1850, and many others.

Another jewish novelist was Leopold Kampert. He was born in Bohemia in 1822. He studied at the Prague University and Vienna University. His stories treat of Jewish life and conditions. His principal works are "Geschchte aus dem Ghetto," "Bohmuche Juden," "Am Pflug," "Nieve Gesichten aus dem Ghetto," and other interesting novels.

THE HEBREW REVIVAL

By Yetta Weisfield, Senior Nordia Girls

One of the greatest miracles in the history of Jewish culture in the last half century is the Hebrew revival. After centuries of half-death, of a language new and strong, this Hebrew revival is the rebirth. Without the revival of the Jewish language, the Jewish nation would lose half its meaning. For everything that binds us to the past is wrapped up in the Hebrew language. Language is more than a sort of baggage car to carry thought, it is a living body of which thought is the soul. Each language has a character of its own. Any student soon discovers its rare quality, the Hebraic character, its directness, its swift motion, its simplicity, its unity, these qualities are in the Hebrew language.

When our people lived in its own land and spoke and thought in its own tongue, its life was normal and creative. Before we lost our land we spoke Aramaic, a dialect closely related to Hebrew. Yet our greatest literature remains Hebrew literature. Even when we were exiled from our land, so long as we were able to keep our language intact and to use it, we built up even in the shadow of the golus national works that were a power of strength to us in our struggle for life. Every great movement in Jewish history was heralded first in Hebrew literature. So, too, with our modern national movement. Its forerunner was the modern revival of Hebrew national movement. No one really knows when this new movement began. The Jews never ceased to write or read or even to speak Hebrew. Some families have used it continuously throughout the generations and to the Jewish people it always has been the language of prayer and of religious study.

We might say that the Hebrew revival began with Moses Mendelssohn and his followers. In 1784, the group of which Moses was the leader found a Hebrew periodical called Ha-meassif. The contributions to these Meassifim were from a literary standpoint often very poor. Nevertheless, the Meassefim did much for the revival of Hebrew. This group, which worked for the development of the Hebrew language, did so not from motives of nationalism but from motives which are its very opposite bound up with the desire for assimilation. With it Hebrew was only a means of spreading modern ideas and modern education among the Jewish masses who did not know the language of the land. For them the revival was to be a bridge over which they might pass from the dark ghetto into a bright paradise of European culture.

To a certain sense the Jews were still living in the middle ages. Modern life, modern culture had not even knocked at their ghetto door. That does not mean that they were uneducated. At this time there was a raging battle of words between the Chassidim, a mystic ecstatic sect, and their opponents, the Talmudists who were called Misnagdim. Among these Misnagdim was one of the sanest and noblest Jews of all time who was called Elija of Vilna. He did much for the revival of Hebrew by insisting upon the study of Hebrew grammar and the Bible. The Talmudists had long since these neglected. On the other hand, the Chassidim prepared the ground for the Hebrew revival.

The group which published the Meassifim were much dissatisfied with the state of Hebrew style. So they took up the slogan "back to the Bible," and themselves wrote in the style of the Bible. The Bible reawakened the feeling for romance, and kindled into a vivid flame the old longing became almost habitual and commonplace through the repetition of prayer for our land and our freedom. The Bible is the best Zionist book in the world. And so, to go forward to Zion we had first to go back and find the way. The young people found it and loved it.

Abraham Mapu wrote the first Hebrew novel. This novel was called the Love of Zion. Another poet who found his way into the hearts of the people was Yehudah Leib Gordon who through the power and beauty of the Hebrew style greatly aided the development of Jewish national thought. They would have been driven into foreign fields to seek other languages if Gordon had not given them in the Hebrew tongue a literature to satisfy their longings.

Among this group of Hebrew writers there was also a third who was called Perez Smolenskin. He was always a lover of the Hebrew language. In his book, Am Olam, the Eternal People, he pictures the Jews as the prophetic people who were called who must carry forward the spirit of the Hebrew prophets in their own land and in the prophets' tongue. He also founded a monthly journal, Hashachar, The Dawn.

With the rise of conscious Jewish nationalism in the Love of Zion movement all sorts of clubs and societies were formed to develop Hebrew as a spoken language. It was a hard task to convert a written into a spoken language. The societies rose and fell; but the movement still persisted.

Eliezer Ben Yehudah, one of the founders of the Zion movement, saw clearly the necessity of recreating Hebrew as a spoken language on the soil of Palestine. He went to Palestine to recreate a living Hebrew language. He had to endure ridicule, opposition, yet he persisted. To-day tens of thousands of Jews are speaking Hebrew as their daily language.

THE JEWS IN SPAIN

By Hilda Witkin, Neviah Girls, Miss Lena Soltz, Leader

The fourteenth century marked the beginning of that age which was known as the "Golden Era" for the Jews of Spain. In truth, it was, for the Spanish-Jews reached the zenith of their influence when Pedro I, the son and successor of Alfonso XI, ascended the throne. Pedro was not quite sixteen years of age at that time but from the commencement of his reign he so surrounded himself with Jews that his enemies in derision spoke of his court as "a Jewish Court." The Jews remained ever his true adherents.

Henry de Trastamara, the illegitimate half-brother of Pedro I, was very jealous of the support the Jews gave Pedro. He determined to undermine the king by turning the Spanish gentiles against the Jews. With the alleged intention of freeing Queen Blanca, who was being held prisoner in Alcazar, Henry and his brother, at the head of a rapacious mob, invaded the Alcana; they plundered the warehouses and murdered about 12,000 persons, without distinction of age or sex.

The more friendly Pedro showed himself toward the Jews, and the more he protected them, the more antagonistic became the attitude of his half-brother, who, when he invaded Castile in 1360, murdered all the Jews living in Najero and exposed those of Mirando de Ebro to robbery and butchery.

About this time it was open warfare between Pedro and Henry. Pedro did not lack the means of carrying on warfare but good fortune had deserted him. In order to win the Castilian throne, Henry called to his aid the dreaded "Grand Company." Wherever his ferocious soldiers went they fell upon the Jews; in Breniesca not one living soul was left of 200 Jewish families which had lived there. Having been proclaimed king in Calahorra, Henry entered Burgos triumphantly. He began his tyranny by taxing the Jews so heavily, that in order to raise the enormous sum the king demanded, they were compelled to sell all their property even the ornaments on the Torah scrolls. The Jews in other Spanish provinces were also punished severely. In his distress, Pedro solicited aid from a neighbouring prince, and Henry was forced to flee, but soon returned to Castile with fresh troops and taxed the Jews of Burgos for permission to remain in the city.

Everywhere the Jews remained loyal to Pedro, in whose army they fought bravely; he showed his good will towards them by calling the King of Granada to his aid and especially requested the latter to protect the Jews. Nevertheless, they suffered greatly. Meanwhile Henry still went on destroying, plundering and killing everything pertaining to the Jews. The suffering had reached its culminating point, especially in Taledo, which was besieged by Henry and in which no less than 8,000 persons died through famine and hardships of war. This terrible civil conflict did not end until the death of Pedro, who was beheaded by Henry.

When Henry de Trastamara ascended the throne as Henry II there began for the Castilian Jews an era of suffering and persecution, culminating in their expulsion. Finally the Jews were almost reduced to serfdom and their property taken away from them. Henry could not dispense with the service of the Jews altogether and in spite of his aversion he employed wealthy Jews, among them Samuel Abrananel as financial councillor and tax collector. The clergy whose power became greater and greater under the reign of the fratricide stirred the anti-Jewish prejudices of the masses into clamourous assertion. It was demanded that the Jews should be kept far from the palaces of the grandees, should not be allowed to hold public office, should live apart from the Christians, should not wear costly garments, etc., but the worst punishment was that the Jews were forced to wear a badge which branded them as non-believers according to the Spaniards. The suffering of the Jews became so great that many Jews were converted to the Christian faith to avoid the torture and suffering even though in their hearts they remained true to their own faith. There were many religious debates held in which the learned Jewish scholars were forced to give in to their Spanish opponents, although in their own hearts they knew that they were right.

The persecution, the laws of exclusion, the humiliation inflicted upon them, and the many conversions among them had greatly injured the Jews, but with them suffered the kingdom of Spain. Commerce and industry were at a standstill, the soil was not cultivated and finances were disturbed.

The position of the Jews under John II became somewhat more endurable and the Jews were allowed to engage in the various trades, and under certain conditions were allowed to practice medicine. They still, however, wore the badge and were kept apart from Christians. But they were at least protected by the king who made a law punishing any Christian assailing them.

The position of the Jews of Spain was fairly favourable in the second half of the fifteenth century. Wealthy converted Jews occupied prominent positions at both the courts of Henry IV of Castile and John II of Aragon. Both kings employed Jews as physicians. Now and again there were uprisings against the Jews and many would be killed or were burned on the slightest pretexts.

When Ferdinand and Isabella ascended the throne of Spain the condition of the Jews became worse until finally an edict of expulsion was issued against the Jews of Spain by Ferdinand and Isabella. It ordered all Jews to leave the kingdom by the last day of July. Thus the Jews left Spain forever and emigrated to foreign countries where they made their homes. Many Jews suffered greatly and were forced, through circumstance, to return to Spain and be baptized. Those that returned or remained in Spain and became converted were known as Maranos.

When Spain became a republic in 1858, a repeal of the Edict of Expulsion was secured and the Jews were permitted once more upon Spanish soil. Very few of them have availed themselves of this privilege, a small congregation at Madrid being the chief sign of renewed life.

In many ways the inquisition was a boon to the Jews of Spain as it removed them from the influence of the cruel Spaniards and established them in countries where they could develop their own peculiar genius.

TRAVELS THROUGH PALESTINE

By Ben Aaron Malachi Aralove, Twelve Years Old, Young Zionist Circle

The author tells of his wanderings and travels through Palestine during the Great War.

How My Travels Began

I was in Palestine for five years from 1915 to 1920. During this time there was not much progress in Palestine, because of the Great War. On account of the serious conditions my parents and I had to wander from place to place over Palestine. Our wandering began at Kinerith.

Kinerith is a small colony of pioneers. It is situated at the Sea of Galilee. The scenery at the Sea of Galilee is hard to describe, but I will undertake the task. If you look at the view at noontime you see a calm, blue and rippling sea, with smooth and cool air drifting out of it. At sundown the sun shines so beautifully on the calm sea that it casts a reflection of the overhanging mountains. It makes one sorrowful when the sun has gone down but there is another great scene to see yet. At midnight when everyone is asleep the full moon creeps out from behind the clouds, and shines very gaily on the mirror-like lake, so that it illuminates the colony with a natural light.

You would ask me what the inhabitants work at. They have various occupations. In the dry part of the land they sow grain, while in the swampy and marshy parts they plant eucalyptus trees, which suck in the malaria germs.

Digania is a group of pioneers whose occupation is the same as the people of Kinerith. Between these two colonies runs the mighty Jordan River. If one wants to cross the Jordan River from Kinerith to Digania, you have to cross a ford bare-footed. On the shore of the Jordan River grow little hedges with beautiful wild flowers which bend and shake over the clear, ripply water.

Likewise we travelled through many colonies in Golil. The Chalutzim and Chalutzos work with energy and song. They are glad that it is theirs to build up the Holy Land, Eretz Israel. On our way to Jaffa we passed Shamron and Amuck Israel.

I entered Judaea and came to the plains of Bee Shamen. There I saw the Chalutzim gathering the harvest. Oh with what joy and song did they do their work. At sundown they put the harvest on a large wagon, and then they all jumped on the wagons and made merry. As soon as they neared home, the children of the "Kevutza" came running toward them and shout "Shalom! Shalom." Within a few seconds the children were also on the wagon, and with great laughter rode into the large barnyard. There they met the rest of the "Kevutza" and adjoined to the great dining-hall. Although it was no holiday, everybody was happy and joyful.

From Ben Shamen we rode to Jaffa and Tel-Aviv. I was in Jaffa one day with my parents and then we all left for Tel-Aviv, of which we had heard so much. Between Jaffa and Tel-Aviv is a beautiful decorated gate. We entered this gate, and the first street we walked into was called Herzl Street. On each side of the street are very nice homes of fine architecture. At the summit of the street is the Herzl Hebrew High School. To describe its position better, I will give you an example. If you live in Toronto and you are walking up University Avenue, you can see the Parliament Buildings. In the same way you can see the Great Herzl High School when walking up Herzl Street. At that time in Tel-Aviv, there were only a few schools. The only means of lighting was by coal-oil lamps. There were no cars and the only means of transportation was by camels, mules or horses.

Now we leave Tel-Aviv for Old Jerusalem. The road to Old and New Jerusalem is uphill between mountains and torrents. So we rode on for four hours.

The sun shone brightly and a light breeze cooled the air. Far away in the distance we could hear the musical bells of an Arabian caravan.

Onward we rode till we came to Old Jerusalem. The first place we visited was the eastern wall of the holy temple. There we saw aged men and women, some praying, some weeping and some kissing the stones of the holy wall. I felt as if I had entered the Holy of the Holies, my soul was praying for the greatness of the past and the wretchedness of the temple of to-day.

I could not stand this any longer, so I went onward into the narrow streets of Old Jerusalem. Passing by Arabian bazaars we saw various types of peoples.

We passed the gates of Old Jerusalem and entered New Jerusalem. New Jerusalem cannot be compared with the old.

Here there are broad streets, nice houses, large stores, and beautiful synagogues.

After we finished our visit we went out to the outskirts of Jerusalem. There I saw Mount Olive. There was nothing on it but wild bushes, and at the top of the mountain was a Moorish Temple. But now there is the great Hebrew University on it. We also saw Mount Zion, which surrounds Jerusalem. The sun shone and the sky was clear and blue. We stood at the walls of Jerusalem, and it was hard to separate ourselves from the beautiful city. The beauty of the past hypnotized us, but we had to go on, so we bid Jerusalem farewell—"Shalom, Shalom."

From here we re-traced our steps toward Tel-Aviv. We went through the historical road Afroso on the way to Bethlehem, passing the grave of our "Great Grandmother, Rachael." I reminded myself of the time that Jacob and his family wandered on this road to Jerusalem just as we had. I lived in Tel-Aviv for two years. After living there two years I went to Haifa to take a ship for America. I was in Haifa one day and then sailed with my parents away to Canada. Farewell, farewell, Palestine.

SLIGHT RELIEF FOR POLISH JEWS

The heavy taxation in Poland, which caused the ruin of many Jewish traders and shopkeepers, and which was the cause of numerous complaints presented to the Government, will be slightly reduced, according to an official document issued by the Minister of Finance. The old belief that the Jews are rich and able to pay was the cause of making a great deal of the heavy taxes applicable to them especially. In the new circular issued to tax collectors, the Minister stresses the point that they consider carefully the capacity of those taxed and provision is made for the payment of the taxes in instalments, which met with a hearty welcome on the part of Jewish merchants.

The orthodox elements throughout Poland are uniting for a determined fight against the tendency of making the Kehillah organizations secular, advocated mainly by the Zionist groups. Conferences are being called of all orthodox leaders, including also the Hasidim, in order to prepare the road for the Kehillah elections that are to take place in Galicia very soon, and a conference of orthodox leaders in Vilna has already been held, with the same aim in view.

REV. MORRIS JOSEPH CELEBRATES 80TH BIRTHDAY

The Rev. Morris Joseph, Emeritus Minister of the West London Synagogue, attained his eightieth birthday on Monday, May 28.

Mr. Joseph was born on the 28th of May, 1848, being a son of the Rev. David Joseph, Minister of the Maiden Lane Synagogue, which was later absorbed by the Western Synagogue. He was appointed Minister and Secretary of the North London Synagogue in 1868, when the synagogue was established, and six years later he was appointed Minister at the Old Hebrew Congregation, Liverpool. Ill-health led to his resignation from this office, and he remained in semi-retirement for some years. He was to have been appointed Minister of the Hampstead Synagogue, but the then Chief Rabbi (Dr. Herman Adler) declined to sanction the appointment, on the ground that Mr. Joseph's views were not sufficiently orthodox. Shortly afterwards he was elected Senior Minister of the West London Synagogue of British Jews, a post which he held with distinction until his retirement in 1922, when he was made Emeritus Minister. Mr. Joseph is the author of "Judaism as Creed and Life," which has now become a classic.

A secret anti-Semitic organization, which had for its purpose the provocation of anti-Jewish excesses, was discovered in Bar, government of Podol, by the Ogpu, the secret Soviet police. Travellers who have arrived here relate that among the members of the organization were found some who were members of the local Soviet praesidium. Many arrests were made.

Prison terms and deportation were imposed by the Tel Aviv court on three communists who demonstrated against the practice of flogging prisoners in the Palestine jails and resisting the police who attempted to disperse the demonstration. Lipsman was sentenced to twenty-five days in jail to be followed by deportation, Holzman to a month imprisonment and Rachel Jzevsky to ten days.

The Anti-Malaria Commission of the League of Nations, which is holding its sessions at Geneva, extended an invitation to Dr. Kligler, of the Hebrew University of Jerusalem to attend the sessions. Dr. Kligler was at one time connected with the Rockefeller Commission to combat malaria.

The Federation of Jewish Communities in Jugo-Slavia has drafted a Bill to regulate the position of the members of the Jewish Faith in Jugo-Slavia. The Bill has been submitted to the Ministry of Public Worship, and will shortly be placed before Parliament.

Police intervention was necessary to protect Rabbi Shapiro, the Chassidic Rabbi of Munkacz, Carpatho-Russia, Czechoslovakia, who was on a visit to Lemberg. His adversaries, the followers of the Chassidic Rebbe of Belz, with whom he has been engaged in a long drawn out acrimonious controversy, learning of his whereabouts in the city, gathered before the house, throwing stones and shouting. Police dispersed the mob and placed a guard at the house until his departure.

Rabbi Moses Vigdor Chaikin, formerly Dayyan in London, died in Tel Aviv last week at the age of seventy-six. Rabbi Chaikin was a native of Russia, but he later settled in London where he became Rabbi of the Federation of Synagogues, when the first Lord Swaythling was the president of that organization, and also held the position of Dayyan. About two years ago he resigned his position and settled in Tel Aviv.

The Ozet, the society for the settlement of Jews on the land, has formulated new plans for furthering the work. About two issues ago this column told of the difficulty young Jewish farmers have in finding suitable girls who want to be farmers' wives. It promised to give the name of a man in touch with young farmers to any girls who wanted to know it. A number of girls did inquire but some anonymously asked that the name be printed. Realizing that it takes courage to make such an inquiry to a printed column and guessing that there may be other girls who can't bring themselves to the point of asking for the name, this column gives it herewith: George W. Simon, director of the Western Branch of the Jewish Agricultural Society, Chicago, Ill. Girls who sent names and addresses should consider this their answer. Their letters were treated confidentially, of course, and destroyed, of course, too. There was a dignity about them all and charm about most. May the shadows of the writers never decrease and may the enterprise of the writers be fittingly rewarded by romance and adventure and happiness!

A lady writes from Washington, D.C., to object to the fact that this column in a recent review of Ludwig Lewisohn's "The Island Within," urged people to "read it now while the vogue for it is on." She objected to the implication that perhaps people might not want to read it if it weren't the vogue and that those who do read it do so mainly because it is being talked about. Some people do read a book for the joy they find in reading it because it is a good book. Some read it for this reason and the added one that it is being talked about. This is defensible enough. Such a book as "The Island Within" makes excellent drawing-room conversational lubrication. The statement that people read a book because it is new and there is a vogue for it is obvious enough to be called a fact and to occasion little surprise. The word vogue is written all over everything. Why not over reading? Several years ago "Haunch, Paunch and Jowl" was the book of the moment. It was known then as an interesting, thought-provoking, autobiographical book to many persons who didn't read it at that time. Are they reading it and buying it now? Few are buying it for gifts, say, because "The Island Within" is the thing. No one talks about it or has time for it. People who read voraciously and "keep up" with the latest vogue in good, readable books can't stop now for "Haunch, Paunch and Jowl," just because they didn't get to it when it was all the go! Life is too short for that. They must hurry on. Pretty soon there will be another book of Jewish interest aside from the many of mere human interest and once they as readers get behind it is hard to catch up. When people are asking each other intensely, almost inquisitively: "Have you read such and such by so and so, yet?" try saying in an off-hand manner: "I've just been reading Thackeray's 'Vanity Fair' again." In less than a week you will be talked about as odd and all askew. In less than two weeks, people will believe almost anything of you. It will soon be hard for you to get fire insurance and you may even be avoided.

News has reached this country that in Germany there is being considered the establishment of a Jewish matrimonial agency to function throughout all of German Jewry. Intermarriage and the decrease in Jewish marriages have alarmed Jewish leaders to the point where they are making systematic plans to counteract forces against Jewish marriages and are including in these plans American high pressure salesmanship methods. This is no small job in an age when the institution of marriage itself bears at least superficial evidences of suffering wear and tear. The whole situation must be a serious one although it has its humourous aspects, for a Jewish matrimonial agency to start off properly must be able to talk fluently on the subject of dowery. Also poor girls must be supplied with trousseaux which fact means more funds. Propagandists must spread a renewal of faith in marriage itself and persuade reluctant bachelors of their duty to their race and themselves, to say nothing of their duty to the girls. Evidently, the whole thing has got away completely from the spell of the shadchen. It must be a sad day for him when he sees himself so powerless and times so changed through war, poverty and modern trends. If to some crass minds, match-making was formerly considered a trade, well, it was also an art and a profession, it took a gift and proved a boon to humanity. To-day the Jewish match-making in Germany must be a matter of racial concern, to be gone at with bureaus and established funds alas. Shadchens in this pleasant country have been heard to complain because they weren't invited to the weddings and there pointed out as the talented cupids who brought it about! They don't know when they're well off with business going on as usual.

A Great Organization Which Ensures Uniformity in Quality of Whole Milk and Ice Cream

From hundreds of prize dairy farms throughout Western Ontario, the Carruthers-Silverwood Company receive their supplies for Ice Cream and "Whole" Milk distribution.

It is because of the wide selection of these sources of supply that strict uniformity in the high content of butterfat (cream) in the milk is made possible.

Thus the great Carruthers-Silverwood "chain of service" is demonstrated not only in the prompt delivery of "Whole" Milk from each one of 19 dairies in Ontario cities and towns, but it extends right to the sources of supply which guarantee uniform richness in quality of "Whole" milk and "Smoother than Velvet" Ice Cream throughout the entire year.

HOW DREAMS MATERIALIZE

It is our desire at certain times of the year to get away from the din of city traffic, and out to where the slightest noise would be instantly noticeable. We often think of being aboard a steamer out in mid ocean, where time hangs peacefully upon your hands, and the worries of life have fled. We dream of these things, yet little do we realize that these dreams can come true if we but pause for one moment to think. What of inland waters? We only think of them as being fit for anglers and those who delight in canoeing. But of steamers with broad white decks, where we can sit in some quiet corner and give ourselves up to dreamy thought, do we ever think of such possibilities? They do exist, and think of it, for two whole days on an ocean of your own, embarking at Port McNicoll, sweeping out across Lake Huron, through the great Soo Canal, and out over Lake Superior, the greatest body of fresh water in the world. Your dreams, therefore, can materialize, and more so if you call upon the Canadian Pacific Railway, obtaining all information regarding this wonderful trip, and finally asking them for reservations.

Northern Ontario, now open for settlement at fifty cents per acre, contains millions of acres of the finest agricultural land in the world. Its resources in lumber, minerals, water, power, fish, game and scenery are immense. The land calls for men to cultivate it, and in return will give health, comfort and prosperity.

What settlers say of the soil, climate, farming and forest life, is told in a most attractive booklet issued under the direction of the Honourable John S. Martin, Minister of Agriculture for Ontario. Full instructions in regards to acquiring a title to these rich agricultural lands are also given.

CAMP BNAI BRITH OPENS

July 2 about 105 boys arrived at Camp Bnai Brith. The boys were divided into twelve groups and each assigned a cabin. Each cabin chose for itself a name and announced that they were ready to win the honour ribbon, awarded to the best all-around cabin. The boys leaving the different cabins with their respective counsellors built individual small fires and roasted their own supper. At these suppers, sing-songs, stories and discussion took place. Regular instruction classes started Tuesday morning in swimming, woodcraft, baseball, volley ball, soccer, track and boxing. Mr. Garbe, head swimming instructor, arranged the boys in different swimming classes; R. Goldenberg took the track squad in hand while the camp boxer, M. Caplan, got his programme under way. D. Palter took his handicraft classes; N. Lieberman, woodcraft class; M. Goldenberg, soccer groups, and J. Kane's dramatics made the stunts of a better sort. Tuesday evening the boy challenged the counsellors to a baseball game, the counsellors winning. Wednesday evening the first council ring took place and the boys were initiated into it. Thursday evening, after a hike-day, a supper sing-song took place. Services were held Friday evening and Saturday morning, M. Cohn officiating. Sermonettes were delivered by the boys themselves. Stunt night took place Saturday. Sunday, Mr. and Mrs. Raphael and daughters were among the guests, Mr. Raphael officiating at flag lowering. Directly after supper, Bob Abate has his gang of Lizzies play the counsellors. The line-up: Lizzies, first base, Levy; second base, Dvoretsky; short stop, Gallander; left field, Levy. COMMUNITY LEAGUE

The only game played in the Jewish Community League last week was Wednesday night, when the Bnai Brith team, managed by Dr. Lipson, met the Weintraubs from Buffalo, rated as the strongest team in the State of New York. The game drew the largest crowd of the season, and after an appeal on behalf of the Bnai Brith Camp, by Harry Rosenthal, vice-president of the I.O.B.B., the fans contributed almost $40 to go to the camp, which together with $10 from a previous game, means that the League has sent just short of $50 this season to this cause. The game ended in a tie 7 to 7, with Nadie Applebaum stopping the attempt of the Buffalo team to win. For the visitors, Parnass in left, and Schaefer on first, were the stars, the first robbing the local players of several hits, while Schaefer went wild on bases stealing across the plate twice. Miller and Stone both had real homers for Bnai Brith, with Cohen also having one, while the star of the field was George Altman, who played fine ball in centre, and Dr. Hoffman, who was in town for the game and played a star game at first base. The League announces that the League trophy for this year has been donated by Leon Scher, College Street. The cup will probably be on display in the window of Mr. Scher's store at College and Major Streets.

The Effect of ICE Upon Food is Something More than Refrigeration

THERE are certain things which cannot well be improved upon, and ICE, produced from pure water, is one of them. Nothing excels this time-tried refrigerant.

Ice does not discolor meats, nor does it take moisture from foods or rob them of their priceless flavor. It keeps all foods at their best.

Ice is cheap and abundant. Keep your refrigerator well iced—always—and save food, flavor and money.
